ABSTRACT

Advantage Course (ADCourse) or ADC is a tutoring institution located in the city of Bandung, has been established since 2015. ADC has various problems in teaching and learning activities, one of the solutions to the problems experienced is the development of online tutoring applications. This application aims to facilitate and assist students in ADC study guidance and specifically on content management of material presented by instructors to students. This tutoring application focuses on providing facilities that are expected to be able to help students prepare for final-level exams as well as in getting study material outside of school or outside guidance. The material features contained in the tutoring application are content management modules for student users, namely, student learning material with subject separators presented in pdf and video files. This tutoring application is done by the Prototype method.

Keywords: Advantage Course, Tutoring