

ABSTRACT

The high growth of urbanization requires governments to solve the problem created by it. Smart City is one possible solution addressing the problem. Smart Healthcare as a component of Smart City need to be implemented so the city can increase the quality of life of its citizens. The study tries to find out which variables and indicators can be used as a measurement for Smart Healthcare implementation.