Kindergarten is the first step of formal education a child would take as they enter the school age and along with time, now there is a non-formal that allows a child to learn basic things in life and prepare themselves to enter the formal one. The non-formal education usually available within a daycare as they care for the child as well as educate them. Children under the age of six are commonly referred to as Golden Age which many milestones in their lives occur at this time and will have an important role for growing and developing in the future. This design will focus on how children under the age of six behave and do their activity while interacting with the atmosphere and interior where they play or study to support their growth and development.
