

ABSTRACT

The self-acceptance of a mother for her child is indicated by the attitude of accepting her child as best as possible with compassion, full attention, but there is a mother who is unable to accept her child, such as not accepting that her child has mental or physical disabilities, but there is a process that can make a mother can accept these conditions. In the animated series Nussa: Bissa, there is a depiction of the self-acceptance process of a mother who has a child with a disability. The purpose of this study is to determine a mother's self-acceptance of a child with disabilities in the scene series Nussa Spesial: Nussa Bisa. The research method used by researchers is qualitative with a narrative analysis approach. The research subjects in this study were the Nussa animation and the object of the research, namely the special Nussa series: Nussa, there is a relationship with the formulation of the problem in the study, namely the self-acceptance of a mother who has a child with a disability in the scene, there is a description of a mother's self-acceptance. The results showed that from the scenes that have been studied, there is a depiction of the self-acceptance process, namely the five stage of grief, starting with rejection until finally the acceptance experienced by a mother who has a child with a disability in the scene of the Nussa Special Series: Nussa Bisa.

Keywords: Self-Acceptance, Mother, Disability