

ABSTRACT

A student is someone who is in the process of gaining as much knowledge as possible at the level of education. It is not uncommon for students to gain knowledge far from their original place of residence or commonly referred to as wandering. The apartment is one of the choices for students to live in, discussing the design location apartment which is located in the Parahyangan Residences Apartment in Bandung with a 1 bedroom unit type with an area of approximately 28 m<sup>2</sup> which tends to carry cold interior colors, so this type is very suitable to be combined with Scandinavian-style furniture. with a clean, functional design concept and the use of natural materials. From the location survey that has been carried out, it can be seen that the table in the apartment with this type of unit does not support the needs and user facilities needed for students as a study table and dining table, this can be a reference for designing a table by carrying a Scandinavian style that focuses on its functionality. A table is a piece of furniture that has a table top and has legs to support the table top. Desks can be found easily in various locations such as home, office, and others. The table can have several functions on the same table as a work desk with a dressing table, a work desk with a console table, and others with dimensions according to ergonomic standards. From the description of the problem, the author will design a furniture product in the form of a table using qualitative methods and data analysis techniques using comparative analysis and also adding multifunctional aspects, ergonomics aspects to the product as well as with a Scandinavian concept whose characteristics are functionality and adding visuals to the table that is still beautiful and simple.
