

ABSTRACT

Sexual violence is a common case in Indonesia. victims of sexual violence are women. Every year cases of sexual violence continue to increase. There are many factors that cause women to often become objects of men's sexuality, one of which is the thought and lack of knowledge of the perpetrators that what they are doing is a sexual act. However, very few people blame women just because of the way they dress. Things like that make sex offenders more uncontrollable and make it a normal thing. This study aims to design an application design for the protection of women against non-verbal sexual violence to prevent such violence from occurring and make women feel safe. The method used in this design is the method of design thinking. With the design of this application, the author hopes to realize that it can be used by the community to help women from sexual violence they are in.
