Bandar Laksamana District is one of the districts in Riau. A sub-district is an administrative grouping of the Indonesian state under level II regions headed by a camat. Government institutions are the foremost institutions related to public services, for that it is necessary to provide full service to the community regarding what the community needs. At the Bandar Laksamana District Office, it can be concluded that the problems that exist in this office are how to properly organize space, place furniture properly to make it look neat, optimize natural light in the room and how to design the room by presenting the local cultural locality. Riau is a city of Malay culture that is highly respected by its people today. The government office is not only a place for the management of an area but also can be a representation of the area it occupies or leads. Therefore, it is necessary to redesign the Bandar Laksamana District Office to provide the best service to the community by presenting the cultural characteristics of the area with current government office standards, so a cultural approach is needed to achieve the design goals.
