

ABSTRACT

Indonesia consists of many cultures that create a lot of difference and diversity. One way we can embrace diversity is through tolerance. Teaching tolerant behavior to children is very important during their growth and development. The lack of education, media and knowledge about diversity and tolerance in the environment that surrounds them, will be a burden for children and intolerance. Therefore, there is a need for educational media on diversity and tolerance to mold their character and instill a sense of tolerance in their souls. The method used is a qualitative method through interviews and quantitative through a questionnaire. The analytical model used is the AISAS model. The end result of this research is the design of an illustrated book on diversity in Indonesia.
