

ABSTRACT

The Irrigation Area Electronic Information System or abbreviated as SIEDI is a Website-based application. The information system is a system consisting of components - components within an institution to achieve a goal of presenting information. Information system can also be regarded as a set of interrelated components that function to collect, process, store and distribute information to support decision-making and supervision in irrigation development.

Keywords: Information systems, Electronics, Irrigation, Institutions, Components