

ABSTRACT

Sexual and reproductive health clinic is a public health facility that focuses on physical and mental reproductive health and healthy sexual lifestyle. This sexual and reproductive health clinic can be a place for people who want to know their sexual and reproductive health status and treatment. As a health service, it should be able to provide health services related to sexual and reproductive health by paying attention to the psychology of patients who feel excessive anxiety when checking their health status. Therefore, it is necessary to design a sexual and reproductive health clinic through a space psychology approach to user anxiety that can meet the needs of users physically and psychologically.
