

ABSTRACT

Rapid development in healthcare through clinics and hospitals is significant today. A clinic is an individual facility providing basic or specialized medical services (Ministry of Health Regulation No. 9, 2014). Klinik Global Sarana Medika in Kabupaten Malang is a prominent clinic. It aims to become a Grade C hospital, but observations have revealed equipment shortages and spatial density. VIP room aesthetics and inpatient capacity require attention. For successful growth and functioning, the clinic must comply with Technical Guidelines for Class C Hospital Infrastructure and Facilities (Ministry of Health, RI, 2007). The primary goal is patient comfort and adherence to standards. Design methodology includes observation, interviews, field studies, and secondary data collection from literature, documentation, and questionnaires. The purpose of designing the interior of Klinik Global Sarana Medika is to cater to user needs as space requirements evolve over time, while considering a design that maintains user psychology comfort within the clinic's premises.
