

ABSTRACT

A clinic is a facility to provide health services for both individuals who provide basic and specialized medicine. There are two types of clinics, namely the main clinic and the primary clinic. The second difference is that the main clinic provides various facility services, while the primary clinic only provides basic general medical services. Nurhayati Clinic is an example of this private property, one of three clinic units in Garut Regency, Nurhayati Clinic is one of which is a primary clinic type. Every clinic must have various kinds of problems to provide comfort, safety, and to help work productivity. The emergence of these problems is important to implement Indoor Health and Comfort (IHC) in the design of Pratama Nurhayati Clinic. The goal is to create comfort in terms of air and lighting, improve the layout of furniture and reduce negative space. This design was carried out referring to aspects of the Green Building Council Indonesia (GBCI), one of the criteria taken was Indoor Health and Comfort (IHC).
