

ABSTRACT

Dark tourism is a type of tourism related to death and grief, so that currently it is still in the gray zone and theoretically is still fragile and questionable. This study aims to determine tourist interest in dark tourism. This research was conducted using the Literature Review method, which aims to collect and take the essence of previous research and analyze several expert overviews written in the manuscript. These sources consist of several international and national journals. The results of this study indicate that tourists' interest in visiting dark tourism is experience, empathy, curiosity, historical and cultural interest, tourist attraction, and learning.
