Discrimination often becomes a hot topic of conversation or public talk in social circles. Seeing so many humans who are often indifferent to others with regard to a word, this can lead to contradictory perceptions or different points of view among them. As is the case with racism or discrimination that leads to the physicality of each person, for example, is the difference in skin color. This act of racism against skin color can be troubling for those who have a different skin color than the skin color of the other person. In this final project, the author created a work in the form of an experimental film entitled "Visualization of Works Regarding Discrimination of Skin Color in the Form of Experimental Films". An experimental film raised by the author, which is about discrimination on skin color. In the work of this final project, the author has a goal, which is to try to show the audience that a human's words and point of view can be changed by the sight or judgment of someone who does not require it physically or in terms of the color of each individual's skin.
