

ABSTRACT

Interfaith couples are something that many people often hear about nowadays. Interfaith marriages or what are also called interfaith marriages are marriages carried out by couples who have different beliefs. Up until this moment, interfaith couples are still a social issue which has become a problem amongs people in Indonesia. Young couples who want to continue their relationship to the level of marriage usually have serious problems so that it's a big consideration to continue their relationship to the level of marriage. Even so, there are quite a few couples who want to continue their relationship towards marriage due to many reasons. In dealing with the chronology of this matter, researchers will review it using communication identity theory. Identity communication theory was developed from research investigating ethnic differences in communication as well as describing the nature of intra and inter ethnic communication. The aim to be achieved through this research is to find out the identity of communication carried out between couples of different religions in Indonesia based on communication identity theory. Therefore, researchers want to know the role of interpersonal communication carried out by interfaith couples through research entitled Communication Identity between Unmarried Interfaith Couples.
