

ABSTRACT

The high rate of sexual domestic violence mostly affects women as victims. According to the data, most cases are experienced at 13-17 years old. The impact affects teenager sexuality and exposure records on individuals. Another fact notes that most victims are targeted by non-marital partners (boyfriends), husbands or wives, and even their parents. The missing sexual protection from the family, especially the lack of sexual education, is one of the factors that most influence this phenomenon.

Fitrah is the innate nature of all humans. This nature will later shape the characteristics of each person. Sexuality is also included in the Fitrah which exists in humans. This conception wants to be introduced as a solution to this current phenomenon. Through an approach based on the essence of the conception of Fitrah, this design will later be packaged in the form of educational media, as a preventive measure in preventing sexual violence in the domestic sphere. With a qualitative method, this research collected data through observation, interviews with several experts, and literature studies to achieve valid and targeted research results.
