

ABSTRACT

Psychedelic may be a phenomenon that is not yet known by many people or is still rarely discussed. In this research and work, the author makes a work in the form of a Psychedelic phenomenon caused by the use of the drug LSD or Lysergic Acid Diethylamide which is a drug synthesized in 1983 and its psychoactive effects were discovered in 1943 and this drug was used during the 1950-1960s as an experimental drug in psychiatric research to produce what is called “experimental psychosis” by changing the neurotransmitter system in psychotherapeutic procedures (Passie Tortten, et al., 2008). This phenomenon felt by LSD users is presented by the author with a work in the form of an experimental film. One of the experimental films that the author used as a reference in making this work is Enter The Void (2009). The work in this study is closely related to Psychedelic and the effects felt by LSD users so as to create an image to people who have not or have just heard the term Psychedelic through this work.
