Losing a loved one, especially a parent, has a significant impact on the life of a teenager. They were abandoned by their closest people at an early age and had to adapt to a new life after their parents died. They went through the death of their parents gradually and tried to recover from the lowest point in their lives. The author created an experimental film entitled "Blue Hydrangea" to visualize the life of a child who lost both of his parents. In this work, the author's goal is to convey to the audience that being a boy is full of responsibility and still needs a mother figure as a loved one, especially the author, conveyed using the medium of experimental film. Which will later be useful for the audience to feel how the feelings are conveyed in the author's experimental film.
