

ABSTRACT

Technological developments in various fields of life take place very rapidly, especially in the field of computer technology. Progress of information technology in Indonesia, especially in the field of internet provides a great influence for information systems used by companies. Today many companies make use of information technology with an online computerized system that uses the Internet to support the company and helping to increase sales. Computerized system of online sales is expected to help increase sales of goods, either online or directly.

In this final project will be made of food ordering method that can be accessed from the Internet customer. WEB-based interface that can be easily accessed by the user, can be with computers, laptops, and others. Method used in software development is the waterfall method, implemented using the PHP programming language processing while using a MySQL database.

Online-based sales system designed is expected to help accelerate the sales process Restaurant online. Thus, the performance of these Restaurant can be improved to become more effective and efficient, and the company gets the maximum profit.

The output expected from this project that is the system of a restaurant reservation service information to facilitate their customers online. In the form of WEB based, which have been downloaded and can be accessed from anywhere through internet media.

Keyword : WEB, PHP, MySQL, Reservation, Internet, Online.